Highways

The main east-west highway traversing central Alberta, Provincial Highway 16, travels directly through the County of Vermilion River. The highway is designated as a core route in Canada's National Highway System and forms the Yellowhead branch of the Trans-Canada Highway. The County's major east-west highways are Highway 16 in the south, and Highway 45 to the north. Highway 45 connects several communities in the County and to the two dominant north-south routes, Highway 41 and Highway 897. These two routes provide connection into the industrial developments of northeastern Alberta as well as tourism destinations both in northeastern Alberta and northwestern Saskatchewan. Highway 893 also connects the region from north to south, intersecting Highways 45 and 16.
